DIEPPE RAID A SURPRISE

CANADIAN STATEMENT

NEW evidence that the Dieppe raid was a surprise to the Germans, the P.A. states, is given in an account of the operations by the Canadian Minister of National Defence, Colonel the Hon. J. L. Ralston, based on the latest reports.

"It is believed," he says, "that the enemy, despite the size of the force involved and the necessary magnitude of the preparation, had no information that a specific operation against the Dieppe area was projected. The almost complete achievement of surprise during the Channel crossing, he records, was marred by one mishap when landing craft encountered five or six enemy armed vessels escorting a tanker. This in itself," he says, "was important evidence that the enemy was not expecting an operation on our part." The Germans on the French coast were, nevertheless, in a state of "general alert." Numerous cases of gallantry are mentioned in the report, which states "not one man of the Canadian Army failed in his duty. All ranks are anxious for a further reckoning with the enemy."

THE LANDING

The first wave of tanks was landed successfully, but they came under direct fire as soon as they got off the landing craft. Some got on to the boulevard in front of the town and penetrated further, but others did not get off the beach. An hour later a floating reserve landed and with great dash captured the heavily fortified Casino. At one stage destroyers closed the beaches almost to the point of grounding to support the re-embarkation by fire and to pick up survivors. Under the heaviest forms of artillery, mortar and machine-gun fire, the operation was "comparable to the most dangerous task assigned to troops of the last war."

The report concludes:—"The raid compelled the enemy to concentrate air squadrons from many distant points, and to commit a large force to action. Even night fighters, night bombers and training squadrons were thrown into the fight. The troops have returned from the enterprise with added confidence in themselves, and in the leadership of their officers and N.C.O.'s, which, from start to finish, was of the very highest order."

HEAVY PRICE

Colonel Ralston makes the significant statement that the objectives of the operation were "vital to the agreed offensive policy" of the United Nations. Considered from this aspect the result of the operation afforded "complete confidence in the effective co-operation of the efforts of the services in large combined operations." That a "very heavy price" had to be paid for the advantages gained from the enterprise was expected, but it would probably have been less but for the chance encounter with the armed trawlers. This resulted in a twenty-minute delay in the attack by the Royal Regiment of Canada on the beach at Puits.

A spokesman at the Canadian National Defence Headquarters in Ottawa stated yesterday that he understood that relatives of some of the men previously reported missing at Dieppe had received information that they were prisoners. Such notification would be based on information received through the International Red Cross.

The Minister of Defence, Colonel Ralston, stated on Tuesday that 2,547 Canadian officers and men were missing, and that total casualties were 3,350.—(Reuter.)

BIG GUNS SHELLING STALINGRAD

RUSSIAN OFFENSIVE AT VORONEZH

DEFENDERS of Stalingrad are facing new dangers; the dusky skies above the city outskirts are filled with troop-carrier aircraft, from which German troops are dropping to engage in furious fighting in the built-up areas, while transport 'planes are flying up German troops and light guns, and masses of artillery are rumbling east to strengthen the numerous batteries already bombarding the city.

The Soviet Command, too, is bringing up from bases beyond the east bank of the Volga reinforcements of tough Siberian troops.

Berlin declares that the "fate of Stalingrad cannot be doubted," and that the German pincers are closing in on the city from north and south, and claims success on the Terek River in an outflanking attack, in which the Soviet positions were pierced.

The Soviet armies have begun a new four-direction offensive against the Germans' north flank at Voronezh.—(Reuter.)

REINFORCEMENTS BY AIR

MOSCOW, Friday—Cabling late to-night, Reuter's Correspondent says:—"German Commando troops are being dropped from troop-carrying 'planes all over the terrain before Stalingrad, and at the outskirts of the city. German transport 'planes are flying up reinforcements of men and machine-guns, while along the roads from the banks of the Don masses of German artillery are rolling up into positions to bombard the city.

"Under cover of night, across the broad bridgeless Volga the Soviet Command is bringing in supplies from bases beyond the east bank. Stalingrad is preparing to sell its life dearly.

"Fighting with the utmost ferocity, Russian troops have repulsed new German tank and infantry attacks in the north-west of the city, and Soviet troops, in fierce counter-attacks, are fighting to dislodge enemy shock troops and Tommy-gunners. Bayonet fighting is taking place in streets and buildings. German anti-tank guns installed in one built-up area were smashed under the tracks of Soviet tanks in a fierce counter-attack. Forty-eight anti-tank guns were destroyed in this assault.

BIG GUNS COME UP

"The Soviet garrison troops are now being battered by long-range and medium-range German guns. This bombardment, added to the weight of the German attack with panzer, infantry and air forces, is making the situation of the defending forces one of growing gravity. Red Army reinforcements continue to reach Stalingrad, in spite of the attacks on Soviet communications by the Luftwaffe. New forces of Siberian troops have arrived to defend the city, and other Siberian reinforcements are on their way.

"On the north flank of the southern front—Voronezh—the Red Army has unleashed a new offensive from four directions, with a view to relieving the Stalingrad position. The offensive is on a large scale.

"Soviet troops, wresting the initiative from the enemy on the Terek River's south bank, have not only held up the German advance, but regained part of the lost ground. Their continued success, however, will depend on the ability of Soviet airmen to sever the German communications across the river, thereby cutting them off from reinforcements and supplies."

In the Voronezh area yesterday Soviet troops recaptured an inhabited locality and wiped out 1,300 Germans.—(Reuter.)

GERMAN REPORTS

STOCKHOLM, Friday.—German front line reports speak of street fighting in the "inferno of Stalingrad." Bloody battles are taking place for every house and every street corner. Tanks are only playing a secondary role, and German reports insist that the weight of the fighting has now fallen on infantry and light artillery.

Berlin Radio said to-night: "The fate of Stalingrad cannot be doubted. From the north and south the town is in the grip of pincers, which are continually pressing closer together. If the operations seem to be progressing very slowly, it is because the town is very powerfully fortified and because the aim of the German Command is to economise forces as much as possible. The battle is proceeding according to plan. German troops have succeeded in penetrating further into the centre of the town in heavy street and house fighting. Soviet troops try again and again to check the advance of the German troops in ferocious counter-attacks, which involve them in heavy losses.

Berlin Radio stated to-night:—"German tank formations on the Terek front yesterday pierced the Soviet positions in an outflanking attack.. In hard fighting the German tanks worked their way into the rear of an enemy fighting group, pushed it back and annihilated it."—(Reuter.)

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

MOSCOW, Friday. — To-night's Soviet communiqué states:—"During September 18 our troops fought fierce engagements with the enemy in the Stalingrad and Mozdok areas. In the north-western outskirts of Stalingrad fierce actions were fought against the enemy. In one sector, where the enemy concentrated large infantry and tank forces, he succeeded, at the cost of heavy losses, in getting possession of several streets. Parts of the lost positions were regained in the course of the day by our troops.

"Heavy fighting for a commanding height continues in another sector. All German attempts to capture this valuable position have met with failure and the enemy's attacks have been repulsed by our troops, which have demolished 26 tanks and 48 motor vehicles, and annihilated about two battalions of German infantry.

"Active operations were conducted by our forces in the Mozdok area. The Germans undertook a number of counter-attacks, which were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. East of Mozdok four attacks were launched by the Germans, supported by 100 tanks. Sixteen of these were put out of action, and about 900 officers and men were wiped out. South-east of Novorossisk about a battalion of German infantry were wiped out in three days' fighting by a marine unit.

"In the Voronezh area our units attacked the enemy, who put up strong resistance, maintaining heavy fire. As a result of stubborn fighting about two battalions of German infantry were wiped out and 12 batteries of guns and 11 batteries of trench mortars were destroyed. Our men captured eight guns and eleven mortars.—(Reuter.)

AFTER MANŒUVRES

TROOPS TO "FIGHT" BACK

The trials of some of the infantry battalions who took part in Ireland's largest military exercises are not yet over, although the last shot in the "Battle of Munster" was fired.

Marching back to Dublin at the rate of 35 miles a day, they will be engaged by battalions of the Dublin L.D.F. Cavalry and armoured units will be harassed in the Wicklow Hills by the L.D.F. there, who already are planning to repel the invaders by ambush and tank-trap.

After the "armistice" all the participating units—the mechanised cavalry, the infantry brigades, the mobile columns, and the local defenders—will march through Dublin on Sunday, September 27.

FISHERMEN FINED £90

Patrick Connors, Thomas Connors, jun., and Patrick Pepper, fishermen, Passage East, Co. Waterford, were, at Waterford Court yesterday, fined £30 each for unlawfully unshipping quantities of rope, cushions, fibre mats, brush heads and 15 gallons of paint, valued at £44 odd, from a vessel in Dunmore Bay to a small boat named The Yank, on June 30 last. The defence put up by Mr. R. J. Farrell, solicitor, was that no offence had been committed. The vessel in question had come from Rosslare in ballast, and at the former court evidence had been given that proper entry had been made to the Customs at Rosslare.

ILL-LUCK DOGGED TOBRUK RAID

HOW DESTROYERS WERE SUNK

"FANTASTIC ill-luck" delayed the Tobruk landing ninety minutes, and "a million to one shell hit" led to the loss of two British destroyers, says Reuter's correspondent, in an eye-witness's story of the land-sea-air attack on the Axis base.

The actual landing, he says, was delayed for an hour and a half by a trivial incident—a hook used in handling boats coming adrift. This held up the entire party, and probably had an important effect on the operation. More precious minutes were lost when a tow line parted just as the boats were leaving.

What the correspondent describes as another "almost unbelievable misfortune" occurred when the shell and bomb-torn destroyer Sikh was being towed seawards by her sister ship Zulu and both were lost. "By a million to one chance a shell cut the tow-line, and thus the operation of passing a line had to be undertaken a second time—a mile from the shore, within point-blank range of the Axis guns."

"As we steam away after the spectacular joint raid on Tobruk a tall column of smoke rising from the sea is our last sight of the British destroyer Sikh."

THE LANDING

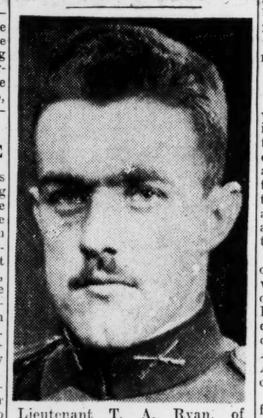
The Sikh and the Zulu came to Tobruk, with other naval craft, to land troops at Tobruk to destroy shore installations, fuel and ammunition dumps and inflict serious injury on this all-important Axis supply base, says the Correspondent.

"Armed with Tommy-guns, Bren guns, machine-guns and rifles, every man was also bristling with grenades, sticky bombs and gun-cotton. Each man responsible for demolition had 20lbs. of gun-cotton.

"Besides huge boxes of ammunition of various kinds on our decks and tied to our forecastle were several red and green boxes containing sufficient gelignite to blow the average city sky-high."

SHIPS LOST

For five and a half hours heavy bombers attacked Tobruk, and then landing parties set out for a little beach only 50 yards long. They were picked up by the Axis searchlights, and then the Sikh was hit, but still able to travel. The Zulu took her in tow, but the cable was cut by a shell. The Zulu raced seawards, but seven dive-bombers attacked her one after another. "As the final one shot past there was a loud thump and the deck kicked beneath me. The ship heeled over at once. All except essential personnel were transferred to another ship which had joined us. We leapt from one heaving ship to another. Then Zulu was taken in tow by a third ship, but sank later."



Lieutenant T. A. Ryan, of Cashel, one of the two members of the Defence Forces drowned while fording the Blackwater during the recent manœuvres. Like Sergeant John McElligott, who was drowned at the same time, he belonged to the 12th Battalion.

"FORCE HAD TO BE USED"

INDIAN LEADER'S VIEW

NEW DELHI, Friday.—Mr. M. S. Aney, leader of the Indian legislature, concluding the four-day debate to-day, denied cases which had been quoted, alleging misuse of power, and claimed that the Government's action had been debated in such a way that the Government could afford to remain silent. He would have made the biggest mistake of his life if he had voted against his colleagues' decision to arrest the Congress leaders. "It was not easy to put down riotous and rebellious people. In meeting the situation force had to be used, and, in using that force, certain latitude had to be given to the persons who were on the spot. If there had been excesses it was for the provincial governments and officers responsible for the discipline of the forces to take note of the facts and inquire into the complaints."

Indian Communists to-day appealed to U.S. Communists to urge President Roosevelt to press Britain to release the Congress leaders and agree to the establishment of an Indian national government "which can alone save the situation."—(Reuter.)

DRINK HOURS

VIEWS ON NEW PROPOSALS

It is learned already that many persons engaged in the licensed trade, employers and workers, are opposed to the proposed changes in the hours of publichouses, and the most general criticism is that directed at the suggested extension and splitting of the Sunday opening hours.

One trader said that most of them feel that the present hours are long enough, the proposed change would raise difficulties with the assistants, and he doubted if, except in a few small areas in the city, it would be much benefit to the public. Most assistants who expressed views are also against the proposal, and owners of publichouses in the suburbs, with a large bona-fide trade, object to the proposal that that trade should be abolished except for a period on Sunday. The enforcement of the proposed regulations would deprive them of their chief source of livelihood.

ADMINISTRATORS FOR BELFAST

MINISTER'S DECISION

THE Minister of Home Affairs in Northern Ireland, Sir Dawson Bates, has appointed as Administrators for the City of Belfast:—

Mr. William Robinson, J.P., managing director of Messrs. Robinson, Ledlie, Ferguson and Co., Ltd., drapers, Belfast; Mr. Charles S. Neill, Belfast Chamber of Commerce, and managing director of James Neill, Ltd., Reliable Flour Mills, and director of Abraham Neill, Ltd., and Mr. C. W. Grant, O.B.E., Barrister-at-Law, Chief Auditor to the Ministry of Home Security. Messrs. Robinson and Neill will carry on their duties without remuneration. Mr. Grant's office will be full time.

Mr. Robinson's firm is a big departmental store, known in Belfast as the Bank Buildings. He is a native of North Armagh, and began his business career in Dublin, later becoming head of the firm of Forster and Co., Newry. While in Newry he was, for a time, Chairman of the Newry Urban Council. He went to Belfast in 1928, and is a past President of the Belfast Chamber of Trade. At present he is Chairman of the Belfast Wholesale Merchants and Manufacturers' Association.

Mr. Neill was President of the Irish Rugby Football Union in 1932-33, and has been Hon. Secretary of Collegians Rugby Football Club for 45 years.

Mr. Grant has been Chief Auditor to the Home Ministry since 1936. He was educated at T.C.D. and entered the service of the Local Government Board in Dublin in 1901. After a period of war service in the Royal Irish Fusiliers he joined the Northern Ministry of Home Affairs in 1921.

CITY COUNCIL

The City Council, under the Act, will be placed in the same position as Parliament, formulating policy and controlling the civic purse. The responsibility of expenditure, contracts, etc., rests on the administrators and Corporation officials, subject to the approval of the Minister of Home Affairs.

The bill providing for the appointment of the administrators was first introduced in the Northern Ireland House of Commons in June. The reason then given was the City Council's failure after an ultimatum to put forward a scheme of municipal reform which the Minister could regard as adequate for the protection of ratepayers' interests.

MADAGASCAR PORT CAPTURED

BRITISH PUSHING ON

BRITISH forces, pushing steadily forward across Madagascar's high interior plateau, are now within 75 miles of Antananarivo, the capital. This news was announced in Vichy last night.

A SURRENDER

It followed a British communiqué, which disclosed that Tamatave, the island's chief port, had surrendered to a new landing in strength on the east coast, says Press Association and Reuter. An envoy sent ashore to secure the peaceful occupation of the town was received with fire, but after a few shells had been directed at the defences by British warships the town surrendered.

Latest official news of the advance on Antananarivo—now threatened as well from the north-east with the occupation of Tamatave—is that British troops fought a successful engagement south of Andriba. The column reached a point near Ankazobe, 50 miles south of Andriba, and 75 miles north of the capital.

The British communiqué confirmed that on Thursday the French plenipotentiaries refused to accept British terms. These terms, it was stated in London, were military conditions of surrender, and were not concerned with Madagascar's future administration.

BRITISH ATTACK

The Secretary of State for the Colonies in Vichy announced last night:—"At 7 a.m. to-day the British launched an attack with considerable forces, and reached a point near Ankazobe, 120 kilometres (75 miles) from Antananarivo. At 9 a.m., 20 British warships appeared off the east coast, opposite Tamatave, and landed troops after having bombarded the port. French troops are resisting the British advance towards the interior."

A Reuter telegram from Vichy last night stated that M. Annet, in a message to the French Secretary for the Colonies, said:—"As a symbol of the feelings of the whole people, and as a gesture of non-acceptance of the armistice terms, I, in full accord with the Government of the Marshal, propose to signify our will to resist by my absence from the capital if the adversary reaches it."

116 COMMUNISTS SHOT IN FRANCE

MANY DEPORTATIONS

LONDON, Friday.—A proclamation was issued yesterday by General Stuelpnagel, Commanding the German Forces in the Paris region, closing all places of entertainment to-morrow and Sunday, says the Vichy News Agency. The proclamation reads:—"As the result of the attempts by Communists, terrorists in the pay of Britain, a number of German soldiers and French civilians were killed or wounded.

"As reprisals for these attempts I have had shot 116 Communist terrorists whose participation or complicity was proved. Large scale deportations were also carried out to prevent incidents arising from demonstrations planned by the Communists for Sunday next.

"I order as follows:—

"(1) From 3 p.m. to-morrow until midnight on Sunday all theatres, cinemas, cabarets and other places of entertainment reserved for the French population will be closed in the Department of the Seine, Seine-et-Oise and Seine-et-Marne. All public assemblies, including sports meetings, are forbidden. (2) From 3 p.m. to midnight on Sunday non-German civilians are forbidden to be on the streets in these three departments. The only exceptions are persons concerned with official duties, doctors and midwives. During the forbidden hours existing permits are invalid. If for military or supply reasons further exceptions become necessary the appropriate authorities will issue special permits on demand."—(Reuter.)

"ALLIES MUST BE QUICK"

EUROPE FEARS A CRASH

GIVING what he described as a message "from my observation post in Madrid," Sir Samuel Hoare, British Ambassador to Spain, warned the Allied nations, in a speech to the Chelsea Conservative Club, London, last night, of the great need for speed in the defeat of the Axis Powers.

GREAT DANGER

This was necessary to allay the fear in European countries that victory will take so long that civilisation will crash in the interval. "Victory will certainly come to us, for the Axis will never withstand the weight of our munitions in the air, on the sea and on the ground. The question is not whether we shall win the war, but when shall we win it before the framework of civilisation is vitally damaged?

"I return to England after a year's absence, and I find much to encourage me to give favourable answers to these all-important questions. I see a mobilisation of men and women more complete in certain respects than in any other country, including Totalitarian Germany.

DEATH OF MR. HARRY FRANKS

IRISH AGRICULTURE'S LOSS

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Harry Franks, which took place at his residence, Westfield, Mountrath, yesterday. Eldest son of Mr. Matthew Henry Franks, of Westfield, Mountrath, Mr. Franks was born on July 17, 1871.

He was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and there took the degree of Master of Arts. He was a Fellow of the Surveyors' Institute and a former Chairman of the Irish Branch; but probably his greatest interest lay in the activities of the Royal Dublin Society, with which he had been associated for forty-six years. He joined the Society in 1896, and, having served on the Committee of Agriculture, was elected to the Council in 1918. He was Vice-President of the Society in 1925, President from 1935 till 1938, and became a member of the Executive Committee in 1936. He was also a member of the Council of the Royal Agricultural Society of England.

While Mr. Franks was enthusiastic about all branches of the work of the Royal Dublin Society, he was particularly active in the agricultural sphere. He was a great breeder of Border Leicester sheep and Aberdeen Angus cattle, and had very wide landed interests. He had property at Garrettstown, near Kinsale, and Dromrahan, near Mallow, as well as Westfield, Mountrath. He was senior partner of the firm of Franks and Carter, land agents. He also carried on a great deal of tillage. He was fond of fishing, was a good shot, and liked hunting and sports of all kinds. In his younger days he hunted extensively with the Queen's County Hounds.

He was a Justice of the Peace for Queen's County and the County Cork, and served the office of High Sheriff for both counties. He frequently judged the trade "turnouts" at the Royal Dublin Society's Spring Shows, and judged at cross-Channel agricultural shows.

Mr. Franks was a member of the Church of Ireland, and a familiar figure at the meetings of the General Synod. He married a daughter of Sir Robert Gardner, and had two sons, Robert George, who died in infancy, and Henry Cecil. He is survived by his widow and his son, Henry Cecil.

MUNICIPAL BODIES CONFERENCE

MINISTER'S LETTER

Mr. Sean MacEntee, Minister for Local Government and Public Health, has written to Senator D. Healy, expressing surprise at a statement attributed to him by the morning papers that Mr. O'Kelly, when Minister for Local Government and Public Health, had always attended the conference of the Association of Municipal Authorities in Ireland. He points out that Senator Healy, as president of the Association, must know that neither the Minister for Local Government nor his representative had attended the conference since 1936, following discreditable scenes which took place at certain previous conferences. In view of the attitude which the Association had taken up, he was now considering whether, in accordance with Section 88 of the Local Government Act of 1941, he could give his approval to it. His present view was that he could not.

GAELIC-SPEAKING PRIESTS

The City of Dublin Committee of the Gaelic League last night adopted a motion that Cardinal MacRory be respectfully requested to ensure that at least one Gaelic-speaking priest be appointed to each church in Ireland to attend the spiritual needs of Gaels. The motion has been forwarded to the annual Congress of the Gaelic League, which will be held in Dublin next month.

MILLING WORKERS' WAGES

A conference of delegates, representing flourmill workers, members of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union, held yesterday, decided that general meetings of flourmilling workers be held in all centres to seek their decision on the making of application for bonus order under Emergency Powers (No. 166) Order, 1942.

AIR LINER CLARE LOST WITH NINETEEN LIVES

AN SOS that she was in difficulties was the final word heard from the British flying-boat Clare, trans-ocean air liner, which, British Overseas Airway Corporation announced last night, has been lost, with 19 lives—13 passengers and the crew of six. Her loss was not due to war action, stated the Corporation. She was on a flight from West Africa to the United Kingdom, and her SOS was tapped out shortly after leaving her last port of call. The cause of the accident is being investigated.

The Press Association states that the crew comprised:—Captain G. B. Munson, Acting First Officer A. D. C. Jenkins, Second Navigating Officer E. F. Lace, Supernumerary Navigating Officer A. O. Cundy, Radio Officer E. F. G. Brent, and Radio Officer J. A. Wycherley.

The Clare (23 tons) was, with her sister boat, the Clyde, the first trans-Atlantic flyer to dispense with refuelling in the air. When they began a weekly passenger and mail service between Britain and New York in August, 1940, they took off at their maximum loaded weight of 53,000 lb.

Captain J. C. Kelly Rogers, the former Imperial Airways pilot, who has piloted Mr. Churchill from America, skippered the Clare on her first Atlantic flight.

While being overhauled at New York, in a huge hangar at La Guardia airport, she had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire.

The Clare was formerly named the Australia, and was intended for the trans-Tasman sea service. She was one of a number of Empire class flying boats, and was so big that the double-decked London 'bus could be driven under her wing. As the Australia she was slightly damaged in August, 1939, when taking off from Basra, in the Persian Gulf. In October, 1940, the Cabot and the Caribon, of the same long-range class, were lost on the Norwegian coast.

HOT MEALS FOR CHILDREN

DEPUTATION TO CITY MANAGER

THE need for a comprehensive scheme of hot meals for school-children was stressed yesterday by a deputation to Mr. P. J. Hernon, Dublin City Manager.

Introduced by Councillor Helen Chenevix, they emphasised the acute necessity for the dinners owing to the shortage of sugar and fats and the increased prices of bread and butter; they drew attention to the serious effects of malnutrition on mothers who went without necessities to give more to the children; to the alarming prevalence of tuberculosis, and to the fact that not all the milk supplied to the schools is pasteurised.

EMERGENCY

When Mr. Hernon pointed out that it was not possible to open the Corporation kitchens without Government sanction and the Government maintained that these kitchens must be reserved for an emergency, the deputation urged that a hunger emergency, now developing in Dublin, demanded equal solicitude on the Government's part with a war emergency, and that, in case of war, the children would be immediately evacuated and the kitchens left free for those who remained.

The City Manager undertook to ask for a report from the Medical Officer of Health on the position in the city in regard to poverty and nutrition, and to give due consideration to the deputation's views. On the question of milk pasteurisation, he said, the milk situation was extremely grave owing to transport difficulties, and the contractors had refused to guarantee delivery throughout the winter.

Councillors Dr. Hannigan and Dr. Deasy, and Messrs. Brown, Brack and O Maolain were also present. Mrs. Con Curran spoke for the Save the Children Committee. The Irish Women Workers' Union was represented by Miss Louie Bennett and four working mothers, and Mrs. Kavanagh attended from the Crumlin Labour Party.

In an interview last evening, Miss Bennett said the City Manager's reply was not entirely satisfactory. "We are going on with the campaign," she added. "We will try to get a number of the city doctors interested in the deputation's proposals, and will endeavour to bring pressure in other directions."

FOUR-TON BOMBS

NOW USED BY R.A.F.

The Royal Air Force are dropping 8,000 lb. bombs—about four tons, and twice the weight of the heaviest bombs used hitherto—in their intensified offensive against Germany. The British Air Ministry disclosed this last night in giving first details of the great damage in the recent attacks on Dusseldorf and Karlsruhe, two of Western Germany's important centres of war industry. The 8,000 pounders were dropped in each raid—on Karlsruhe on September 2 and on Dusseldorf on September 10. These are two of the places bombed in the nine raids in the first sixteen nights of this month.

Reconnaissance photographs, the Ministry states, show that 270 acres of Karlsruhe and over a square mile of Dusseldorf were laid waste. Other areas of the towns were severely damaged.

12 DEAD IN RAID

Twelve people were killed in a British south-west coast town raided yesterday by six German raiders, says the Press Association. The dead included a number of men who were in a building which received a direct hit. Considerable damage was done. One of the raiders was shot down by A.-A. near the coast. The others, in a simultaneous dive over the town, released their bombs in a single attack.

BORDEAUX RAID

Aircraft of Coastal Command bombed the docks at Bordeaux on Thursday night, states a British Air Ministry communiqué, which added that Beaufighter aircraft of the same Command on patrol over the Bay of Biscay on Thursday attacked and destroyed three German bombers. One Beaufighter was lost in this engagement.

LABOUR ECONOMIC PLAN

Yesterday, for the second time this week, the Labour Party was in session all day. After the adjournment the Party Secertary, Mr. L. J. Duffy, told our representative that the meeting had given anxious attention to a large number of reports from all parts of the country regarding the standard of living prevalent among rural labourers, especially roadmen, forestry workers and bog workers. Decisions were taken to bring to the notice of the authorities the claims of those sections for a better standard of wages.

It was also decided that action will be taken by the Parliamentary Labour Party to secure a more equitable standard of allowances for unemployed men and their families, necessitous widows and old age pensioners. A programme adapted to secure full employment for unemployed men at adequate wages will be urged in the Dail, with a view to the elimination of mass emigration. An economic committee was set up to deal with the impact of rising prices. It will be the function of the committee to press for family allowances to supplement inadequate incomes and for a moratorium in respect of rents, etc. It was also decided that the Economic Committee should, as its ultimate purpose, take account of the situation which is likely to arise after the termination of the war in respect to agricultural economy, industrial development, etc.

Mr. James Hickey, T.D., presided at the meeting.

LOST SECRETS OF ANCIENT IRISH DYES

A SEARCH for the lost secrets of the ancient Irish dye-trade is at present engaging the joint attention of the Irish Countrywomen's Association and the Irish Homespun Society. For long it has been a subject of regret that we have no knowledge of how to make from native dyes the purples, the blues, the greens in which ancient Irishmen, like Finn MacCool, Cuchulainn and Conal Cearnach arrayed themselves when going to a party.

The only native dye extensively used in modern times is that known in Irish as "crotal," a heathery-brown dye, made from the lichen, which grows on the rocks in most parts of Ireland. Almost all the other colours in the Irish homespuns, except, of course, the natural grey or "bawneen-white," are the product of a twopenny packet of some aniline dye bought at the village shop. Even the petticoated so long admired by visitors to the West of Ireland is not a native dye, and people engaged in research believe that this red, even some centuries ago, was produced from cochineal, which came from South America to Ireland by way of Spain.

During this summer members of the Associations mentioned have been trying out various suggestions made to them, and have had a little success. They have found, for example, that heather-tops give a nice greeny-yellow dye; blackberries a nice purple, and gorse an attractive yellow. Ivy leaves have yielded a green dye, but it is dark and drab and not likely to be very popular. The use of some of these dyes had been known to a small number of people, but the Association is now drawing the general attention of its members to them.

MORE RESEARCH

Miss Maureen McDonald, Assistant Secretary of the I.C.A., said that her Association at present was looking for someone with a knowledge of dyeing, and of spinning and weaving, to undertake more systematic research into native Irish dyes. A fund had been allocated for the purpose, but it was difficult to find someone with the proper qualifications who also had their own facilities for making experiments.

The scarcity of aniline dyes is a contributory cause of the present quest. But it is not the main one. To quote Miss Violet Thurston, an English native dye expert, who visited Ireland recently, "no chemical dye has that lustre, that underglow of rich colour, that delicious aromatic smell, that soft light and shadow, that give such pleasure to the eye."

BEWARE OF THE BOGUS INSPECTOR

Dublin's bogus "inspector" of gas and electricity is still at work. On Thursday last his haul amounted to £70. "Watch out for him," warn the Civic Guard authorities.

This man represents himself to be an inspector of the Dublin Gas Company or the Electricity Supply Board, and asks permission of householders to inspect the meters. While carrying out the 'inspection," he steals cash or valuable articles lying about. He operates in all parts of the city.

All officials of the companies in question are issued with an identity card. Next time you open the door to a person representing himself to be an official, you should ask to see this card. If in any doubt, you are advised to immediately contact the nearest Guard station.

TWO DONEGAL MEN MISSING

Anxiety is felt for the safety of two young men from Carrigans, Co. Donegal, who apparently set off in a small boat on the River Foyle after dark on Wednesday night, and have not been seen since. They are Thomas Wilkie, aged 30, married, a bicycle and boot repairer, and Archie Roulstone, aged 21, single.

After the alarm was raised the police on the Northern Ireland side found at Bready two boat oars, but no trace of a boat. The authorities on both sides of the border are co-operating in the search for the missing men.

KNOWN AT FOYNES

Our Foynes correspondent states that the Clare was lost off the coast of West Africa. She had to make a forced landing in rough seas owing to engine trouble, and was travelling from Lagos to Lisbon. The Clare was one of the first flying boats to inaugurate the trans-Atlantic service from Foynes. She had been calling there regularly. Captain Mussen was well known at Foynes.

DEARER BREAD

Following the increase in the price of native wheat, prices of bread will be increased from Monday next as follows:—

Batch bread, 6½d. per 2lb. loaf (6d. if purchased in a baker's shop), instead of 6d. (5½d. in a baker's shop).

Fancy bread, 7½d. per 2lb. loaf (6½d. if purchased in a baker's shop), instead of 6½d. per 2lb. loaf (6d. if purchased in a baker's shop). Fancy bread may be sold only in units of less than 8 ounces in weight or in units of 1lb., 2lb. or 4lb.

The new prices of fancy bread do not apply to certain proprietary and special brands produced by certain firms, nor to sliced pan loaves sold in wrappers, and soda bread or soda cake.

The cash value of the existing bread voucher issued under the Food Allowance Scheme will be increased from 6d. to 6½d., and recipients will in each fortnight in future receive 6lb. of bread instead of 4lb. as hitherto.

OATMEAL HERE AGAIN

For the first time since last year oatmeal is on sale in Dublin. A small consignment has reached some retailers, and better supplies are expected next week. No price has yet been fixed by the Department of Agriculture, but sealed 1lb. packets are selling at sixpence. This is the equivalent of 7/- a stone.

AN INVESTMENT THAT TAKES CARE OF ITSELF

IN these days of uncertainty and doubt it is almost impossible to find an investment that will give an assured return for outlay.

The Policies of The Irish Assurance Company, Limited, provide absolute security. They are free from price fluctuations, and offer the best investment it is possible to obtain under present circumstances.

In addition, an Assurance Policy is the only investment which carries a relief from Income Tax, as a rebate is allowed on premiums paid on the life of a Policyholder or his wife.

May we help to make your future secure? Particulars will be gladly furnished on application to:—

DEATH OF WELL-KNOWN TRAINER

The death took place, at his residence, Bonita, Ogbourne, Wilts, of Mr. Martin G. Hartigan, the well-known racehorse trainer. Before going to England he rode as an amateur in Ireland. He had several good horses in England and won many races. Gordon Richards served portion of his time in the stable, and subsequently rode several of the horses trained by Mr. Hartigan.

Mr. Hartigan served with the 13th Hussars during the last war, and was awarded the M.C. in Mesopotamia. He rejoined the Army at the beginning of this war. He trained Tho Pen, which won the Cambridgeshire at 50 to 1 in 1930. Mrs. Hartigan is the daughter of the late Mr. George Edwardes, for many years controller of Daly's Theatre, London.

SHORT STORIES

A Word of Praise

By Patrick Kavanagh

Thirteen Stories. By D. B. Cunningham Graham. Penguin Books. Price in Eire, 10½d.

SOME days ago a friend talked to me about the Irish talent for destructive criticism; he went so far as to suggest that I was an excellent example of it, and still farther when he challenged me to write fifty lines of convincing praise on any subject. He claimed that blame is easier than praise, which I deny; but that is not really the point. The point is that while, in the the abstract, Good always predominates over Bad, in this business of books the bad, the fake and the utterly silly are overwhelmingly in the ascendant. It is only by a rare chance that a reviewer gets a book worth keeping more than a week. Most reviewers by implication accept every book as an ephemeral production. Their praise is the praise of a day, and is only valid for the date of issue. Of all the books that have been published during the past season how many are worth even condemnation to-day? If a critic is severe, one should find out by what standards and in what perspective the man judges. Time, as has been observed a million times before, is a more destructive critic even than an Irish critic.

The Penguins

When I want to get something to read that is not liable to be complete rubbish I go to the Penguins. The Penguins are mainly reprints, but they sometimes publish Specials, not many of which are particularly good, and anthologies of poems and short stories which are nearly always good. The Penguin New Writing often contains some of the most stimulating work. Yet these cheap books are seldom reviewed. Of the Penguins that I have read this past six months I best remember an enchanting volume of autobiographical stories: "Thirteen Stories," by R. B. Cunninghame Graham. These sketches were first published in 1900, and to-day they are as lively and alive as ever. The first story is called "Cruz Alta." If I were to say that this story, which is the Odyssey of the author's horse-buying expedition in South America, was worth all Cronin, Margaret Mitchell, Steinbeck, and whoever else is popular, I would not be over-praising it.

Authenticity

The main interest in "Cruz Alta" is its authenticity—not the superficial authenticity, on one plane, of, say, "Gone With the Wind"—but the many-strata truth of imaginative experience. A work of art which gives information only of surfaces is like a man who is fed on skin food—if there happened to be such a thing outside the advertisements. All the world loves a lover and all the world loves a praiser. But you can have too much of either, and if you stop to look at things as they are the objects of desire and the subjects of praise will show all the flaws and rottenness of things human. To use your mind at all is to be critical. It may be that sentiment, too (as Mr. Joseph Holloway, pleading for the cause of sentiment, has time and again explained to me), is part of thought. Anyhow, I have praised a book.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

Russia and the Pacific

The War Moves East. By Strategicus. London: Faber and Faber. 10/- net.

STRATEGICUS is still writing the best general account of the onward movement of the present war. Each successive volume has stressed the purely military strategy, and we are no longer treated to irrelevant and unsubstantiated remarks on contemporary politics. He is to be congratulated on the transformation both in his exposition and in his thought, which has been steadily developing since his first volume. The present work is a model of what a detailed military history should be.

The book is dominated by the overwhelming force of the German invasion of Russia. Such were the claims and counter-claims as the invasion progressed that it is only now that a clear picture of the composite scene can be outlined. There is a very thorough examination of all the problems involved in the great attack on Moscow and in the winter counter-offensive. The latter port

Another Week

The end of another week has come, and Stalingrad remains in Russian hands. Time and again the world has been informed that the fall of this great city was imminent; but its defenders have given the lie to nearly all the military experts, and have proved, not for the first time in military history, that the human element in warfare is incalculable. Even the Germans themselves admit now that the defence of Stalingrad is turning out to be exceptionally obstinate. It is some time since German troops penetrated into the suburbs, and, just as in the case of Madrid during the Spanish Civil War, fighting has been taking place in the streets and alley-ways of the city. This kind of fighting is the most difficult of all from the invaders' point of view. According to German reports, every house in Stalingrad, "from cellar to attic," has been prepared for purposes of defence; and the Russians, civilians as well as soldiers, are fighting with the utmost recklessness. The Germans are using every device of modern warfare in their efforts to reduce the city. They are dropping "Commando" troops from aeroplanes in every available open space near the city. Machine guns and light field guns also are being transported by air to the scene of action; and Marshal von Bock is mobilising every available man and machine in a supreme attempt to overcome Russian resistance. Marshal Timoshenko also is not idle. He is reported to have brought up fresh reserves from Siberia, and to have brought them across the Volga at night. Bayonets are being used in the street fighting. The Russians have been ordered to fight for every yard of ground; and, although the Germans are advancing in several places, their progress is unusually slow. Fighting of this kind, as was proved in Madrid, invariably helps the defenders, if they are sufficiently determined; and there can be no question regarding the resolve of the Soviet armies.

Whatever may be thought of the Soviet system, this war has proved one thing beyond yea or nay: the Russian soldier is as patriotic as any soldier in the world. As an infantryman he has no superior. The men who are fighting under the command of Marshal Timoshenko are just as formidable as their fathers who fought under Brussiloff in the autumn of 1916, when the Russian armies swept across the Carpathians into the plains of Hungary and virtually annihilated the Austro-Hungarian forces. Whatever may be the fate of Stalingrad, its defence will become a landmark in military history. Despite their terrible ordeal, the Russian armies show no sign of cracking. On the contrary, although they are yielding ground at Stalingrad, they are reported to have launched a new offensive from four directions in the Voronezh area, where, according to the German bulletins, operations are developing "on a large scale." Rain is falling at Stalingrad, and the first snows have appeared in the Caucasus. Marshal von Bock is fully aware of the dangers that will threaten his forces if they are compelled to face another Russian winter; and it is more than likely that he will increase the pressure of his attacks during the next couple of weeks. He still has a plentiful supply of reserves; but he and his superiors know that every additional division that is flung into the arena at Stalingrad inevitably must weaken Germany's striking power next spring. The German High Command has been trying to "neutralise" Russia before it tries conclusions with the military might of Great Britain and the United States; if it fails to put the Soviet armies out of action before the beginning of the winter, its task in the spring will be stupendous.

The Pound Sterling

Owing to the virtual suspension of international trading and the artificial stabilisation of such exchange rates as are quoted, there is no true guide to the value of the pound sterling as a purchasing medium abroad. When the war is over, and international commercial relations are resumed, several factors will influence the amount that the pound will be worth in terms of dollars, marks and francs. If peace can be secured without the remoulding of Europe, or the world, into any new "order" or "system" that sweeps away the power held by the financier in the past, it is not improbable that the pound's external value will be decided by the degree of confidence that is shown by investors, particularly foreign investors, in British industrial enterprise, and the integrity of British financial institutions. It would be useless at this stage to speculate upon the probabilities and possibilities. A great deal will depend upon the result of the war, and a great deal may depend upon the damage that has been done to the industrial machinery not only of Britain, but of her rivals in the markets of the world. A new school of military thought obviously has arisen in the last two years, a school which sees the possibility of victory only in the use of air power to smash up the factories of its opponent so completely that the production of material for carrying on the war will be impossible. As virtually every factory in Europe is engaged in the production of war material of one sort or another, the logical outcome of a victory through air power would be the industrial wreckage of the conquered nation, or nations. How much confidence would the external investor possess in the ability of such a nation to re-establish its commercial competence? Would there be artificial aid to the conquered to save its people from starvation, such as was rendered to Germany under the Dawes and Young plans after the last war; or would the victors be determined to keep the loser down permanently? In the heat of the moment there might be a tendency to vote for the continued oppression of the enemy; but, if wiser counsels prevail, it will be realised—as it was realised too late, unfortunately, after the last war—that sick nations throw the economy of the entire world out of gear, and that the wisest course for everybody is to get international trade back to normal as quickly as possible. However, whether the victors be wise or vindictive, it is difficult to visualise a post-war world in which there will not be, for some years at least, a considerable amount of fluctuation in the international exchanges, with policies of deflation or other panaceas tending to play weird tricks with the money market. Ireland is forced to import a certain number of commodities—how many it scarcely was realised until shipping became scarce—and it is impossible for this country to escape altogether the consequences of a fall in the pound's value abroad. Actually there would be a compensating feature in the fact that the prices of our goods would be cheaper in the terms of foreign exchanges, and that our export trade would thus be helped; but, until our export trade with non-British countries was at least equal to our imports from those countries, the compensation would be trifling. Regardless of what happens to the pound abroad, is it not possible for our legislators and leaders to ensure that the pound at home still will buy a pound's worth of bread and butter and vegetables and meat? When sterling fell in 1935 British workers were consoled with the fact that, even if it only were worth 11s. 3d. elsewhere, the pound still bought twenty shillings' worth in Britain. It is impossible for this country to remain independent of external commercial and financial movements, but it should not be impossible so to control the prices of home-produced articles that the Irish worker would not be completely a victim of the operators on bourses of whose existence he is not even aware.

70 YEARS FROM NOW

Within the next few months Dublin will be freed from the fear of drought. The Poulaphouca reservoir, which will supply the city with an extra five million gallons of water daily, is virtually completed, and the authorities are awaiting merely the completion of the filter plant before putting the scheme at the public service.

When they do so the first stage of the scheme will have been completed. At regular intervals during the next sixty or seventy years the remaining three stages will be finished, until, perhaps, in the early years of the twenty-first century the reservoir will be supplying Dublin with twenty million gallons of water a day, thus bringing the daily consumption in the city to over forty million gallons. It will probably be ten years before plant which will bring ten million, instead of only five million, gallons is installed.

TO TRAIN MIDWIVES

Their secretary reported to the Central Midwives' Board that, following their decision to approve Our Lady of Lourdes Hospital as a training school for midwives for Part I. of the course, the Rev. Mother Martin had applied to register four candidates as pupil midwives, and arrangements would be made for them to take out the second part at a training school recognised by the Board.

The Board will consider the advisability of providing instruction in the administration of nitrous oxide and air analgesia for midwives in this country.

The examinations next year will be held in February, May and October.

FUEL CLUBS
SUCCESSFUL SCHEME

Thirty-two shillings' worth of fuel delivered to your house when you have paid only four shillings is a proposition attractive to contemplate. And thinking so much about it has been responsible for the success of the fuel clubs started by the Cinema Branch of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union.

Even if you do not get your load on your "four shillings down," you have a chance on the second, or, at the longest, you wait only eight weeks—with a club of eight persons. It is a strong inducement to join, and information gathered yesterday showed that more cinema workers are coming in. The workers get a "thrill" out of it, too—the excitement of expectancy as the draw for precedence for warmth proceeds.

The system is based on clubs of eight members, each one of whom pays four shillings a week. A collector, usually a shop steward, is appointed, and a draw decides who shall be first, second, third, and next in turn, up to the eighth, to receive the full money's worth of turf and wood blocks. Arrangements are made for delivery by the supplying firm, and when the eighth person has received his or her fuel the members may begin again and continue to subscribe for as long as they want to do so. A new club is formed, perhaps, with the same members, and, perhaps, with others, and exists until the eighth person has been provided for. It is intended to continue the scheme throughout the year.

The great majority of city cinemas have such clubs; some of the largest have six or more, some four or five, some three, and smaller picture houses one or two. One collector has five clubs, has completed his collections from three, and is re-forming them. Generally speaking, the collection of the money is neither a difficult nor an unpleasant task.

IRISH VILLAGE'S PLIGHT
NO CANDLES OR OIL

Complaining about the inadequate supply of kerosene, paraffin and candles in country districts, a Kilmessan, County Meath, correspondent states that the village of Kilmessan and district have received no kerosene for lighting purposes during this month, and that candles are unobtainable.

Paraffin, he says, has been supplied to Trim and Navan, where there is electric light, but none to Kilmessan, and he was told in Navan last Tuesday that none would be available until another tanker came to Dublin. The Government had promised half a gallon for this month.

No candles are available in Kilmessan, he states, and while some people in Trim district can have paraffin for the use of a man-servant living in a separate house, on the land, a relative had been refused it, although this relative had a good number of cows and calves and gave employment in the tilling of land.
